Manager's comment

May was a great month for the fund that gained 3.1%, beating its benchmark by 1.6%. Since the beginning of the year, the fund is only down by 1.2%, outperforming its benchmark by 1%.

The month had nevertheless started poorly as global markets lost between 2% and 7% during the first week. This drop was followed by two calm weeks with low volatility. The last week saved the month as markets fully recovered what they had lost, and more. "Sell in May and go away" did not hold this year.

On the FX side, the USD appreciated against the EUR and other currencies as most investors anticipated a Fed rate hike in June in view of the recent solid US economic data. Starting at 1.16, the EUR ended May 6% lower at 1.10. On the commodity side, Oil reached a new year high at 50 USD while industrial metals dropped significantly in May.
